Hey, I'm John O. Opiyo—a Nairobi-based ICT Consultant and Digital Forensics Expert with over seven years of experience driving transformation for businesses and governments across East Africa. As the Advisor on Youth Affairs, Technology, and Digital Solutions, I'm passionate about harnessing technology to empower communities and spark meaningful change. My mission? To transform society through innovation—delivering smart, practical solutions that make life simpler, safer, and more efficient.

I've built a career crafting custom apps, securing systems against cyber threats, and unraveling digital evidence for legal cases—always with an eye on results that last. Previously, I tackled fraud at FTI Consulting in Cape Town, resolving 150+ banking cases, saving $10 million annually, and slashing investigation times by 30%. I also partnered with Migori County Government to launch five streamlined apps, automating workflows and bolstering security. Leading teams of 20+ tech professionals comes naturally—I thrive on keeping projects on track and delivering impact.

Globally recognized, I'm a proud recipient of awards from the Edutech Startup community and the International Women Technology & Research Forum (IWTRF) in India. Leadership runs deep in my work. I served as Country President of the African Union of Youth Assembly (AUYA), championing youth-led innovation across the continent. With a Telecommunication and Information Engineering degree, plus certifications in forensics and cybersecurity (Coventry University) and EDMS (Kodak), I bring a sharp skill set honed in the UK, USA, and UAE. I'm a member of the Kenya Computer Society and a CISSP holder, blending technical expertise with an approachable style.

Beyond the tech, I'm committed to mentoring the next generation of leaders—whether it's training over 100 professionals in cybersecurity and document systems or guiding young innovators to shine. People describe me as focused yet relatable, always ready to solve a complex challenge or streamline a process.
